I didn't know Ryan, but my son had the chance to get to know him through school. I've come to know that he was a beautiful child and loved making people laugh. He obviously had a very tender heart for others and touched their lives through who he was. We can all learn from Ryan about how to treat others, no matter how they treat us. He must have been a daily blessing to those who knew him. He is in the presence of the Lord today experiencing His unconditional love, understanding how much he touched the lives God's people; "Well done my good and faithful son". Our prayers are for the Houston Family, Central School Students and this community's peace and comfort in the very sad time.

Hi,I'm A'Rhyia Houston.. I know don't nobody get on here anymore but this is kind of like a e-mail to Ryan. But anyways, hey Ryan I miss you more and more each day! Can't nobody take the unconditional love I have for you. I know we've said somethings to each other when we were younger but we both knew we wasn't being for real. But this is for real.. you're really gone and I'm laying here writing you this while tears run down my cheeks! I know when someone we love passes away we always quick to blame God, like it was his fault that you did this. I know god tried his best to talk you out of it but you wasn't listening Ryan why wasn't you listening. I'm not mad at you because you're now living in a world like no other. Ryan I really learned a lot from you and I be going through your stuff. Oh yeah on Thursday you would've graduated with central, and your "boo" blize Johnson she did really good in school and she even mentioned your name! You had a empty seat in centrals graduation with a picture of you and some flowers! But I honestly just wanna thank you for being my guardian angel and my human shield for when I needed you the most. And also thank you for protecting me and carter and momma and also big momma through our hard days..I love you and like I said before no one can and no I'm will ever take your place in my heart 🥹🥰❤️

For so long I have been in the worst turmoil over my son's departure. I am his father, dad, brother and friend. I still feel as I've lost my best friend. He seemingly and endlessly understood me. Even for his age, he could answer questions and shine astronomical lights on issues we discussed. He was and always will be my Baby Genius. Tender and timeless. Tall and wide. Sharp and yet smooth. Dark and bright. Le'Anthony is the best thing that has ever happened to me and without him or his never-ending smile, or his voice I admittedly have crashed. Nothing compares to the chills and pains for the unexpected absence and void. A'Rhyia, uniquely fills her own shoes and stands more firm in the aftermass with her beautiful God-given strength. Please do pray for her and family. Please don't let tragedy strike in your home or even in your community. By all means, love your lovers, opportunities and the rest of the lovenestlove aloud the productivity of your loving. Make LOVE, not war. Sincerely, Dad
